EDITORIAL

Another year has gone, the season of goodwill is over and already we are planning holidays for 1968.

I would like to pass on two quotations which I hope we can all as Christians be concerned about in some way. The first is from an appeal leaflet of a group of Crawley Quakers embarking on a project to meet loneliness by building a residential communal centre and the second from an article answering a criticism of the church being an institution:

“Loneliness the problem. Occasionally to be alone is welcome; but not to be alone continuously. To have no one who really cares; no one interested to share one’s thoughts, plans or reflections; to have only broken dreams to brood upon: that is loneliness. For a short period it may be no more than a burden, but if endured too long without adequate adjustment, it can atrophy the ability to make fulfilling relationships; at worst it may lead to serious withdrawal and mental illness.”

“Yet I still contend Friends must not take upon themselves other people’s chains. They cannot give up their witness to the freedom of the Spirit without loss to themselves, to mankind, indeed to Truth itself. Let those who need to defend the cathedral battlements and aspire to the castle’s pinnacles, do as they must. Let us continue to camp out in the fields and find our holy places in the factories, the market squares, the schools and the offices; let us continue to listen for the holy words that flow freely from the mouths of babes and in response to the questions of 20th century fishermen and tax-gatherers; let us uphold the authority of Truth wherever it is manifest, available as it is for all who want to see; let us bend our energies to respond to the Light from whatever quarter it is reflected, and recognise our frequent failure to reflect it, too. Only by being faithful to our own experience will we be able to meet others at the deep level where fetters have no hold.”

Unfortunately this magazine, only my second, will have to be the last. I have enjoyed the challenge, but as Treasurer of the project to meet loneliness together with some unfortunate personal problems I feel unable to give the time necessary for our magazine.—Any volunteers please to commence with the next magazine.

My thanks to all contributors.

SIBFORD OLD SCHOLARS' ASSOCIATION

Minutes of the Annual General Meeting held at Sibford on Sunday, 27th August, 1967.

President in the Chair: Gordon A. Wells.

The Meeting remembered in silence our friend Harry Randall, a former President, who died since our last Reunion.

1. Minutes.

The Minutes of the Annual General Meeting held at Sibford on 28th August, 1966, having been printed in the magazine, were taken as read and were signed by the President.

2. Headmaster's Report.

Jonas Fielding gave a full and interesting report on the school year. In particular, he mentioned the completion of the Girls' House on the Old Boys' Playground and the anticipated completion of Lister House, being a conversion of part of the Old Manor House.

After a period of stability, there had been a number of staff changes, including the departure of Old Scholars Martin Dodsworth, Arthur Harrison and Wendy Stone.

The School had enjoyed successes in examinations, on the athletics field and in the field of drama. The Chairman thanked the Headmaster for the report.

3. Treasurer's Report.

Martyn Edwards presented the Accounts for the year ended 31st December, 1966. The income and expenditure account showed a loss of some £49 for the year, even though a profit of £87 had been made on the Annual Reunion. The loss was due to the increased cost of the magazine as well as the lower figure of subscriptions received.

Proposed by Brian Wright and seconded agreed that the Accounts be adopted.

4. Secretary's Report.

The Secretary reported that the Committee had met twice since the last Reunion. The Committee had co-opted Ian Weatherhead to serve for 1967 and 1968 and Mark Edwards for 1967.

He referred to the Treasurer's and Membership Secretaries' efforts in writing personal letters to members in arrear with their subscriptions, thus obviating the necessity of sending magazines out c.o.d.

The Committee had organised the Leavers' Party, which was held on 25th June. Some members felt that this was not an unqualified success.

The Reunion Sub-Committee had organised the Reunion and the Secretary paid particular tribute to Michael Finch, the Reunion Secretary, for the work he had put in to this.

In view of the discussion at the last Annual General Meeting, when there was an overwhelming vote in favour of August reunions, the Secretary proposed that we should seek an invitation from the School Committee to hold our 1968 Reunion at the Bank holiday weekend in August. This was agreed.

5. Report of the Representative on the School Committee.

Vera Rollett told us that Charles Kohler had given up the treasurership of the School and that Charles Cadbury had taken his place. Geraldine Cadbury had also joined the Committee.

6. Mabel Harrod Bursary Fund.

In the absence of Martin Dodsworth, the Secretary of the Fund, Alfred Holland, read the following report:

"No visits or exchanges have been arranged during the current year but a comprehensive selection of holiday courses and educational exchanges has been obtained from the Educational Interchange Council and the Central Bureau for Educational Visits and Exchanges.

It is hoped that some sort of short list of visits may be drawn up which will fulfill both the requirements of the Fund committee and the children selected at Sibford.

Because application for exchanges of this nature have to be made in good time this opportunity was missed this year, due to my move from Sibford, but I hope more definite progress will be made this year. The balance in hand remains at about £285."

7. Gift to School.

The President informed Jonas Fielding that it was the Old Scholars' intention to give two seats to the School, one of the seats being in memory of Arnold Kay, the second being the presidential gift for the current year.

8. Election of Officers.

The Secretary reported that certain changes had taken place in the officers during the year, as listed below:

Colours Secretary resigned – Anthony Dring. elected – Eddie Goudge.

Resident Officers resigned – Arthur Harrison.
Wendy Stone.
elected – Michael Rice.
Loraine Spencer.

In accordance with the Rules, the above appointees were confirmed in office for the remainder of the term, namely to December, 1968.

(b) Committee.

In accordance with the new Rules, the following were appointed for the terms listed below:

Adrian Pratt—3 years to 31.12.1970.

Ruth Page, subject to consent—2 years to 31.12.1969.

Christopher Grimes—3 years to 31.12.1970.

(c) Election of President and Vice-President.

President—Gordon A. Wells proposed Jonas Fielding as President for 1968. The Meeting acclaimed the appointment.

Vice-President—Gordon A. Wells proposed Loraine Brown as Vice-President for 1968. The Meeting acclaimed the appointment.

9. Committee Guests.

Allan Bradley who, with his wife Margaret, were our guests for the weekend, expressed his appreciation of the hospitality they had received.

10. Jessie Johnstone.

The Meeting was informed that Jessie Johnstone was in hospital. The Secretary was asked to send her our greetings.

The Meeting closed with a warm vote of thanks to the President for the way in which he had conducted the Meeting.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

"BEYOND THE HILL"

First of all let me say that the position of any president of this association is not to be envied, especially my own. I come between last year's Gulie Grimes, and next year's Jonas Fielding.

Quoting Shakespeare, who says in Julius Caesar,

"I am no orator, as Brutus is;

But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man."

I feel rather like the man who was known as the son of his father when he was young, and as the father of his son when he was older. Nevertheless I am grateful to you for electing me, if only because I represent the older generation.

Perhaps I can claim the distinction of being the only president to give his or her remarks a title. I am calling what I have to say "Beyond the Hill." One privilege one has during this year is that one moves around the association quite a bit. In doing so one immediately realises that, at the hill here, and at the manor there, the school staff have a distinct advantage in that they deal with children between the ages of about 11 and 18 years, whereas in the association we have to attempt to deal with grown people from about 19 years to around 100 years, dependent on where, and how long one lives. It is not easy to choose a subject which will appeal to all old scholars, therefore. You see, a present scholar, who attended this year's leavers' party, is now an old scholar, and may well be here tonight.

Arthur Wellesley, later 1st Duke of Wellington, had an extraordinary capacity for knowing what was on the other side of the hill. From maps of the time, and from the lie of the land, he knew what was there without looking. He was able to decide just where he would stand and fight, and he was undoubtedly successful. Even the field of Waterloo was chosen by him some time before the actual battle was fought. Some thoughts of mine may help those who want to get on, and be successful, like he was.

One should welcome going out into the world, and not fear it. The world outside is not the wicked place it is said to be. There is still so much that is right with it, and so little that is really wrong with it. Granted one's schooldays are pleasant and "sheltered," in that one is learning with others the way to live life to the full. There is no "rat race" except of our making, and no envy of the "Jones" except that we ourselves put there. Although I am now retired, let me talk for a few minutes to those who are still interested in what they earn and in the prestige they have. There is nothing wrong with making money, if one can. It is hard work, and not easy, otherwise everybody would do it.

May I here put in a plea for loyalty. Loyalty to a school, a firm, a system, or a way of life. If one will only remember that there is an essential discipline which must be observed, because one lives in a community, and not alone. One must not forget that there is nothing which cannot be done, if only one has the will to do it.

As a boy at Mosely Road Meeting I well remember that the badge of the institute is a bundle of sticks. Their motto is:—

In essentials, Unity;
In non-essentials, Liberty;
In all things, Charity.

It might well be a good thing for some of us to adopt this motto for ourselves.

What one finds immediately on leaving the hill is that people are ready to help. To help one do the job one has always thought one could do. Thus adult training is very much a part of life in a busy world. Those who feel that the world owes them something for merely being what they are, are soon disillusioned, for they will find that there are millions of people in the same position. How can one stand out from others? Let us take it in two stages, the interview and subsequent training.

The interview is important and relatively simple. It is surprising what can come out of it by the interviewer just letting the interviewed talk, only occasionally the interviewer asking a seemingly irrelevant question. To get through an interview satisfactorily one should know who is to take it, what one wants to do, and to know something about the firm or service for which one is applying. Remember that your attitude towards games, towards your hobbies, counts. They indicate to an interviewer that you can lead others. If you are likely to have dealings with other people remember that they have feelings as well as you. Also one's appearance counts. Especially the part of you that shows? Your face. This is seen first of all. Your appearance should be what is expected of you by the community in which you live. Do not under-rate experience. This merely means that cases have been dealt with before, the odd actions of others are understood, and the reasons people do funny things is explained. It has all happened before.

Anyone who has tried his or her hand at training in industry knows what a thankless task it is. One is always changing a programme or a method and forever seeking the ideal. The instructor in charge of the course gets variety by asking experts to talk about their own particular jobs. He has learnt one very important lesson, and that is that people can only take in so much at one time. Therefore sessions last about 45 minutes, with a "run round the buildings in between." He really is concerned that people shall do their jobs better than they did before. Cynics may say that there is a reason for this. Of course there is. The more contented a person is, and the more he or she knows about the job they are doing, the more loyal they are likely to be, and the greater will be their value to the business they have chosen, quite apart from their own peace of mind. I know of one industrialist who had ideas about people and what he wanted to do. He was a great benefactor. One must, he said, run a successful business first, or one would not have the money for all one wanted to do.

The Sunday Times of a fortnight ago said that a marketing manager could command a salary of anything up to £12,000 per year, but he could only last about ten years. By then he was short of ideas and he would have to rely on other people doing his research for him. Often therefore solid hard work, at a job one likes, even though it is not so remunerative, is often much more worth while. So do not imagine that your ideas are always right. They often are, but it is the view of the majority that counts. When one feels that one has been in a job too long, and before one thinks of changing, remember that this is often the fault of the worker. So often he is coasting along, grumbling most of the time, instead of making himself indispensable.

The future is important to all of us. Changes are taking place every day, and efficiency experts are being called in. What the future has for you is in your own hands. There is no doubt that we are today missing sadly those who died in the last world war, and who would now have been about 38 to 48 years old. Their place must be taken by younger people. In missing them let us at least say that we can do as well as they would have done. This is our best memorial to them.

One thing we must all remember. That is that the slicker things go the more work is put in by somebody somewhere. As a case in point some of you were privileged to see Oliver Twist, produced by the school, at General Meeting. I wonder how many who saw it realised that its success was very largely due to the producer, and the work that had gone into the production before the show.

After Sibford I went on to Bootham, where Arthur Rowntree was headmaster. He was chiefly responsible for the matriculation class. Once a week he was in the habit of dashing into the classroom and writing a quotation, or saying, on the corner of one of the blackboards. This would then stay until he appeared again. One thing he wrote has stayed in my memory since those days, and I will now repeat it as a conclusion to what I have said.

He who is a fool, and knows not that he is a fool, is a fool indeed.
Shun him.

He who is a fool, and knows that he is a fool,
Teach him.

He who is not a fool, and knows that he is not a fool, is a wise man.
Follow him.

AUGUST REUNION, 1967

As one gets older, life certainly seems to go by faster, but at least this helps to bring forward one of the highlights of the year, the annual reunion at Sibford, so that it only seems yesterday that one was revelling in August, 1966. Yet, no sooner than one has escaped from the Bank Holiday weekend rush along the M.1. and A.5. and that warm "back to the womb" feeling has been conjured up by the sight of Elm and Ferris cottages than something novel reveals itself—Sibford is no longer an unchanging rural cul-de-sac, but (as Godfrey Baseley reminded us this August) a social organism, with £10,000 luxury, landscaped pads for the posher comuters of Brum, a choked parking lot by the council houses on the Hookey Road and even some structural alterations in that holy of unholies, the "Blaze." But of course it's the School which undergoes the steady, relentless metamorphosis, with the new Gillett House and the refurbished, truncated Boys' playground as the most startling evidence this year that life for the new Sibfordian is dead soft . . . we even found plastic tuck boxes in which no doubt sophisticated eats can be quite legally stored . . . no more of those parcel inspections, with secret brown-papered compartments containing the humble fruit cake of a quarter of a century back. Surveying the vista of cylindrical white flower tubs, the memorial seat to Arnold Kaye and the compact comforts of the new girls' house block, one O.S. remarked that it was just like one of the smarter Colleges of Education, not like a school at all—anyone who accepts that last thought uncritically should keep an ear primed in the direction of the Headmaster whose report on the school year given later in the weekend bore ample evidence of the fertility and happiness of life at a school which has moved with the times but is not adhering slavishly to the more questionable pressures of our age.

But what of this reunion? The first social impression was sadly identical with that of 1966 and indeed of a number of years back, that the type of association that we have kept in being since the war is fundamentally less attractive to the swinging younger generation, than its rivals such as sporting clubs, college parties abroad, associations centred around profession or place of work, or purely ad hoc groupings; earlier marriage doubtless takes the girls away and that means of course fewer boys. And so we become an "OLD old scholars' association," a matey club in which a considerable contribution is made by those who married keen old Sibfordians . . . it's also a family affair, with a bevy of excited children, even a few dogs. An inspection of the list in the Archway showed few surprises and a few absences. This year we were all sleeping in the new girls' house, over the Archway and in the manor house, and "promming" was the natural thing, a less dangerous form of living than in the past when the odd cork cricket ball should by rights have caused at least the odd fatality.

Right from the Presidential Opening and the buffet supper, three comforting facts were indisputable: that in Gordon Wells we had a President of great wit, energy and verbal punch, dashing around like a stripling and, as we shall see below, a bastion of Western capitalism! Then there was Mike Finch, a reunion secretary who, in addition to devising an adventurous and varied programme kept the whole schedule, especially meals, "running on time" (as they said of Mussolini and the trains) . . . what a change from the indecision and unpunctuality of some reunions years ago! And then there was Mr. Major who, backed up by his willing staff and operating an excellent queuing system for the hot food, kept us all tanked up with excellent meals (including the sort of deliciously satisfying puddings that one's wife won't make!).

The first official function was a welcome visit as guest speaker of Godfrey Baseley who has been producing what is arguably the most popular soap opera of them all, "The Archers." In a splendidly explicit and fluent address he gave us an insight into the formidable planning problems of a serial in which the real live cast have babies, take other jobs and even die in harness, where scripts may have to be revised at a moment's notice because of phenomenal climatic or agricultural events and where the meshing in of several levels of "story" is dictated by such unalterable facts of nature as Jennifer Archer's baby (begorrah). Questions from old scholars flowed in, varying from the "what has happened to Mavis Clodfopper, have you killed her off?" type, to an unpopular enquiry about the lack of significant social or political commentary in the programme in answer to which came the surprising news that politics are taboo on the air. Friday evening ended informally for most of us, "rockets" being far less evident than in the past although someone probably put in a bit of practice.

Saturday morning dawned sunny after a warm, clear night, presaging the finest August reunion weekend that one can remember for several years. Masculine legs were revealed in shorts of varying lengths, the baths were in constant use especially by the children and the serious business of the day (after food that is!) started with a working party under Frank Rollett rubbing down and revarnishing the games pavilion, a task that was put well under way and was to be completed at a later weekend party in September. After lunch, a large motorcade travelled to see over the Washington family home at Sulgrave Manor about eight miles to the east of Banbury and a pleasant picnic tea was afterwards devoured in the grounds. Though generally less impressive than Broughton Castle, scene of the 1966 outing, it made a worthwhile trip. Back at school there was yet more food awaiting us, after which an unusual treat was in store; for many years it has been stressed that we need a "serious" event (apart from Meeting and the A.G.M.) . . . then in 1966 there was a hearty debate about the rights of parents to support private education. This year Mike Finch enterprisingly obtained the services of John Tarver, Secretary to the Oxford Communist Group, who came along ostensibly to talk on "Education and Communism." Inevitably, this meeting became a general quiz on communism in general and none the worse for that. Mr. Tarver, I think, surprised his audience by his friendly air of moderation and reasonableness and a sort of stunned respect radiated out from the businessmen present—they wanted to know, and Mr. Tarver was clearly prepared to stay indefinitely, but the President skilfully kept things moving so that we could go back to the Hill and eat once more, sated as we were intellectually by this extremely charming and disarming politician. Some of us had heard this sort of iron-in-velvet persuasion in our student days and could tick off point after point where Mr. Tarver interpreted facts and cited theories as yet unproven in order to support his case, but he was certainly a "revisionist" who would have been the first target of any Red Guards.

It must be added that he was not spared by some of his questioners and was unconvincing on the ultimate issue of personal freedom and conscience.

And so back to light refreshments and more unofficial rockets, with a large but strangely silent coffee party at Holmby House—the silence was in respect of Frank's guests who had retired to an early bed, including Leslie Baily (a very welcome figure after some years).

Sunday tends to follow a traditional pattern, with Choral, various meetings for worship and the A.G.M. Points of note this year include the new gates and widened entrance to the Gower Meeting House, which permit the parking of visitors' cars off the narrow Temple Mill road. An innovation after Sunday lunch was a Young O.S. meeting with the Reunion Secretary of which little emerged, although one hears that it was not well attended; with the very real efforts of the past year or two to liven up the weekend involving a special sub-committee, it might be hoped that the recent leavers would be able to give valuable comments and suggestions. A short Motor Treasure Hunt, very ably planned and conducted by Michael Rice, filled the rest of the afternoon and took contestants through Traitors' Ford and near Brailes to find earthworms and bus tickets, with some odd questions such as the date of de Gaulle's presidency of France (guesses ranging over 20 years). The winners were Glyn Berrington and Lister Mathews with 60 points out of 75.

After tea, Gordon Wells gave a short, snappy Presidential Address in the course of which he dared to extol the virtues of sound business and the profit motive, showing that at least he had not succumbed to Mr. Tarver's wiles; after high tea (note these frequent refuelling operations) Alan Bradley, our school committee guest for the weekend, gave the address in Evening Meeting. He and his wife Margaret entered happily into all the traditional junketings of the weekend and were stimulating people to talk to—it seems a long way back to one's schooldays when committee members seemed such remote zombies (rather like a group of G.O.C.'s at a parade). Alan Bradley, with a teaching career covering Leighton Park, the creation of a school in Kenya and now the headship of a scheduled comprehensive school at Corby seems a real "find" for Sibford. Inevitably there had to be a break for coffee before we could go on to the A.G.M. which, under Alfred Holland's firm guidance, was the briefest that anyone could recall. It was especially gratifying to hear Jonas Fielding's admirable report (referred to earlier) and to learn that as young an O.S. as Loraine Brown will be succeeding Jonas as President in 1969—those should be two vintage years.

It was nice to see Margaret Smith back after about ten years in Canada, and O.S. enjoyed her two colour films shown after the A.G.M. shot in Japan and at Expo '67. But it was time for more food, this time scheduled as "Wait and See!"—for those who might have been girding up their loins for another marathon walk from Roll-right, this was in fact a barbecue at Holmby House, a cheerful occasion with lots of cheese rolls and bangers, plus impromptu games organised afterwards by John Taylor.

The weather was holding out splendidly and while "Ed's Miscellaneous Sports and Games" filled Monday morning for some ("Ed" being of the Goudge variety), others played off preliminary rounds of the tennis and table tennis competitions (or just drank coffee, etc., the prices of which had meanwhile been lowered by popular request!). The centrepiece of the afternoon was Gordon Well's "Old English Fair," a really excellently contrived and mounted event, with fortune teller ("Madame Sosa"), Bingo, a fruit stall (run by the Blows), Hoopla and so on—from memory only, I seem to recall that an investment of about £26 in expenses and prizes yielded a net profit of £60, of which £49 went to defray the association's debts and the balance was presented to a local home for handicapped children. At the intriguing "Smells Stall," Philip Morris carried off the first prize, followed by Kate Long and a Mr. Hitchens of Sibford Gower. Meanwhile, the annual village 6-a-side cricket tournament was in full swing on a batsmen's wicket; eight teams entered, Sibford O.S. getting as far as round two thanks to a mighty concluding six by our Treasurer to beat Hook Norton but falling to Darlingscott who themselves were beaten 46 to 44 by Brailes.

The tradition of tea on Holly House lawn was followed by a swimming gala organised by Diana Grimes in which Gulie Grimes and Betty Thelton tied at a dead heat in the over-50's race; (Brian Wright is rumoured to have ben disqualified for cheating!). The tennis final was a decisive victory in straight sets by Alan Williams and June Ellis over John Ward, the able organiser, and Kay Brown. In the table tennis, Mike Rice beat Andrew Butt. During yet another high tea Lilian Ward was happy to tell us that she and others had just visited a much-missed absentee, Jessie Johnstone, at present in hospital and very glad to receive our greetings and hear about our activities. Also present at Sibford were Dorothy Prior and Gladys Burgess, swelling the ranks of the Johnstonians.

The Tramps' Ball was now upon us: Mike Finch had been goading us on and many were the garish improvisations, with old hats, baggy trousers, string, tin cans and even genuine beards. Especially gruesome was one atrocious old scrounger, gassed at Mons I believe, who had grovelled his verminous way from somewhere in Kent and was threatening every other tramp who tried to knuckle on to his "pitch." The winners were: men—Lister Mathews, followed by Alec Norman; women—Gulie Grimes, followed by Betty Thelton (a permanent rivalry?); children—Rosemary Fielding. The clever setting, music and general production was, I believe, mainly the work of Ian Wright who made a fine job of it. And so came rockets at the Elm with rather a sparse attendance (thirty or so) which was, believe it or not, the only actual excursion on foot outside the school grounds. This in fact is my only criticism of a great O.S. gathering: that we should not in this cholesteral-soaked, arthritic era have been dragged from our cars and forced to walk in some of the loveliest countryside there is—hint to sub-committee.

Little more need be said. Tuesday dawned bright and we all went away, grateful to the hard-working few who make such gatherings so successful and to the school authorities who invite us so readily year after year. Why don't a few more of you come back in 1968?

S.O.S.A. RE-UNION, 1967

Impressions of H. ALLAN BRADLEY, Headmaster of a scheduled comprehensive school at Corby, Northants. Together with his wife Margaret our School Committee Guests for the weekend.

Few occasions are more inherently prone to exclusiveness than a gathering of the Old Scholars of a School. Even if there is no suggestion of snobbishness, and no sense of commiseration with the outsider, the common experience of Old Scholars is at least an embracing bond, even if not a protective shell. The idea of invited guests at a Re-union is therefore an unusual one, and in imagination, anyhow, the relationship between hosts and guests might be quite a delicate one. Such were the thoughts of the "Committee Guests" invited to the 1967 Re-union. We need not have worried!

The S.O.S.A., it turns out, has a remarkable capacity to absorb guests into its company with hospitable attention, but without fuss. We were made to feel very welcome from the very first moment,— and it was not long before we were discovering common bonds with numbers of folk whom we had never met before, besides renewing a good many old links. By the time we left for home we were feeling thoroughly "dug in," and took away with us a share of the refreshment of spirit which is the real purpose for which O.S. themselves attend such gatherings.

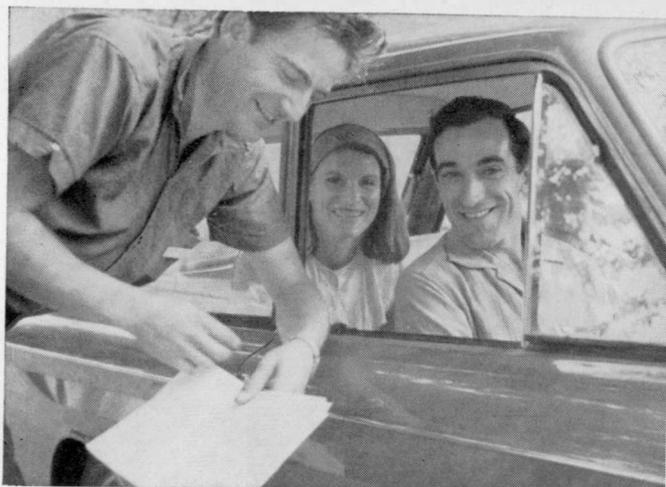

Perhaps we may be suspected of responding by a mere exercise in back-scratching to the Editor's invitation to write an impression of the Re-union. Let us therefore add that we were very interested in the objective appraisal of re-union which is going on, still within the happy spirit of the occasion. Is the difference nowadays between the new generation and the older ones greater than it used to be? Or of a different character? Can the young and the rest meet on common ground? Is the S.O.S.A. fellowship, not merely a continuing one, for those whose membership is of long standing, but also progressive, in the sense that steady recruitment keeps the average age steady too? These things we heard discussed, without rancour towards the young, who were rather lightly represented, or any suggestion that there is a stick-in-the-mud attitude amongst seniors. Beneath an oblige of "Rockets," announcement-time cracks and other pleasantries and pardonable sentimentalities could be detected a measured pedal theme of acknowledgement that things do and must change with the times.

Another of the distinguishing features of the Re-union was, again, unusual in such a gathering. This was the readiness to spend time in discussion of matters, grave and gay, which took everyone, not only out of themselves, but also out of the School and its aura. Whoever heard of an O.S. gathering at any other School which devoted one evening to "The Archers" and another to "Communism and Education"? Yet these evenings were in such right ordering. Perhaps the inclusion of such items helps to explain the lack of undue sentimentality and the capacity of O.S. for calm consideration of the modern situation.

At all events, the 1967 Committee Guests, having arrived with a sense of mild caution, left a few hours early with real regret. The actual Committee Member is particularly grateful for the additional insight he has been given into the character of Sibford, with which he so much enjoys being associated.

GIRO: BRITAIN'S QUIETEST REFORM

by F. P. Thomson (Sibford 1927-32)

A Correction

The 1966 Sibford Magazine had an article on pages 29—32 stating that a sequel to the book instrumental in persuading Parliament to legislate for the National Giro—Giro Credit Transfer Systems—would be published under the title: Giro: Banking Free For All.

But to meet public demand in the United States of America and in Western Europe in particular, it was decided since publication of the article to produce a far more comprehensive study in order to give some sense of purpose and direction to the massive reforms which have resulted from publication of Giro Credit Transfer Systems. One technical journal* has estimated that the effect until April 1967 had cost the banks over £60 million for the modernisation of their services. The new book, published during 1968 by Pergamon Press, Oxford, will therefore be found under the title of: Money in the Computer Age.

* Editorial Commentary, Electronic Components, United Trade Press, London. August and September issues 1967, pages 857 and 953 respectively.

PROFILE

CHRISTOPHER LITTLE (1933-38)

I was born and brought up on the outskirts of Birmingham. I went to Sibford in 1933 and drifted through school in the middle of the ruck finally emerging with School Certificate in 1938. Apart from having a double mastoid in my first term and breaking a leg in, I think, 1935, I spent 5 years quietly absorbing a love of the open air and becoming a fairly practical person with my hands.

After leaving Sibford I spent a year or so helping my elder brother Philip with Poultry, the war made life impossible for us so I joined Bristol Street Motors in Birmingham and spent my time up to 1947 repairing tractors, most of the time travelling to farms to do so.

Life in England seemed very frustrating to me and after applying for jobs in several countries I finally took one with my present employers in Kenya. I have never regretted this move, this is a wonderful country, almost perfect climate, and the choice and opportunities both in business and leisure are beyond the comprehension of anyone who has not been here. I spent my first 2 or 3 years here settling into my work and getting to know those parts of the country which were accessible to me, I also made myself a motor-car which could afford me a little fun in competition. At this time I also teamed up with the man who shared everything with me for the next eight years. We at one time owned between us four competition cars, we prepared another one for races and we had five others cars of various types for getting to work and pleasure motoring! Add to this the fact that Don's business was transport and he operated four 5 ton lorries and you can imagine what our "backyard" looked like! Luckily we "shared" about 50 acres with our landlady and the nearest house was about a mile away, an ideal situation for us. I slowly acquired a more responsible job in the firm and a name in motor sport circles so that I was offered a car by the local agents for my first "East African Safari" in 1954. I broke it. I have since done 9 more "Safaris," finished five, sometimes fairly well up in the order, but am now, because of my increasing responsibilities discouraged by the firm from too much rallying although I do manage about 1,000 miles of competitive motoring each year. 1956 was my peak year when with "works" rally cars and my own racing motors I won the circuit, hill and rally championships and was East African Champion Driver as a result.

More work, more trout fishing, marriage and shortage of cash, all combined to slow down my motoring activities gently from 1958 onwards, until now, with the responsibilities of work, and running the company's rally programme, which usually includes 2 teams of 5 in the "East African Safari," I am gradually but regretfully giving up rallying except for the purpose of trying new ideas or new cars.

During my 21 years in East Africa I have married, (1957) we have a boy 4 years old and a girl 8. We have of course seen considerable changes in the country and are likely to see more yet but politics do not affect our personal lives and this must surely be, even today, one of the best places in the world to live and work.

Marshalls (E. A.) Ltd. for whom I work are part of a group out here turning over some £5 million a year in farming, food canning, boats, manufacturers agencies and Peugeot cars. I am service manager for the car side and have 12 workshops employing some 500 men to look after. I use a petrol injection "404" saloon to cover some 25,000 miles each year for my work and get 2 months leave in Europe every 2 years, flying each way. These leaves are usually spent travelling round England visiting friends and relations, I have been back to Sibford two or three times but always seem to miss the people who were there in my time.

How about O.S. coming to see for themselves soon. With 14 day holidays by air all in for less than £150 each by charter I would be delighted to spend some time showing some of you "my country."

Our Membership Secretary, Gordon A. Wells, is attempting to complete his collection of Sibford Magazines, since our first edition in 1904. Listed are the missing years and he would be grateful if any of you can spare them. EXPO' 67, MONTREAL

From MARGARET H. SMITH (Sibford 1946-53), now living in Ontario, Canada, and who visited Sibford this reunion.

From the observation deck of the Place Ville-Marie skyscraper, high above Montreal, my first glimpse of Expo '67 was of a glittering fairyland floating like a jewelled lily-pad on the dark waters of the St. Lawrence river. Ten cents in an automatic telescope brought the vision nearer, but stole nothing of its enchantment. The geodesic dome of the United States glowed softly like an iridescent soap-bubble; the tapered tower of the British pavilion, crowned with the Union Jack, gleamed white like the funnel of a great ship, next to the complex matchstick ramparts of France. Everywhere, buildings large and small glittered in a luminous mosaic, through which the tiny mini-rail trains threaded their glow-worm path.

At 8.45 a.m., the Place d'Accueil was a mass of people so solid it could not even seethe. Loudspeakers played cheerful music, and every now and then there would be an announcement of countdown time until the opening of the gates. At nine o'clock the turnstiles began to clatter and the stampede began, across the terraces and down the stairs to the Expo Express trains. These trains run from the Place d'Accueil or main entrance, on the mainland, across to the exhibition islands, stopping first at Ile Ste-Hélène, continuing to the man-made Ile Notre-Dame, and then looping back to the amusement park of La Ronde at the far end of the Ile Ste-Hélène.

The basic theme of this world exhibition was "Man and his World" as inspired by St-Exupéry's book "Terres des Hommes" (translated as "Wind, Sand and Stars"). This was expressed through several "theme pavilions" showing "Man in the Community," "Man and his Health," "Man, the Provider" and so on. I was able to visit two of these, "Man and the Polar Regions," and "Man, his planet and space." Both made extensive use of film in the development of their themes, and the quality of the exhibits in general both from the informational and philosophical point of view, was excellent.

Film was used throughout Expo in a variety of ways, and it was very interesting to see how adaptable a captive audience can be to innovations such as multiple image projections and moving screens. The Czechs were among the most imaginative users of this medium. In one semi-darkened room dedicated to Industry, pictures of industrial processes and of workes were projected, not onto screens, but onto the luminous blur of spinning flywheels and other moving parts. In the next room a sort of super slide show was projected from behind onto a mosaic screen of 18in. cubes. Sometimes each cube was an element in a large overall image, like a piece of jigsaw puzzle, sometimes each square showed a different picture, or a repeating pattern. Sometimes the cubes themselves would move in and out in a piston-like motion. All this was accompanied by a musical soundtrack. This strange and fascinating spectacle was being watched with puzzlement, interest and delight by people, many of whom had probably never even taken the trouble to look carefully at an abstract work of art before. In the Ontario pavilion, whose film "A Place to Stand" has been highly commended and is now being shown in commercial cinemas, one little boy near me turned to his mother on entering the cinema and said in disappointed tones: "Oh, it's only one screen, then . . . Will it split up into nine before the end? . . . Isn't this theatre going to move?"

There was so much to see at Expo, and unfortunately so many people wanted to see it, that sometimes there would be queues as much as five hours long during the day for the most popular pavilions. This is why there was always a stampede when the gates opened, to try and arrive as quickly as possible at one of the main attractions. Britain, the U.S.S.R. and U.S.A., Czechoslovakia, the Bell Telephone Company and the National Film Board's "Labyrinth" were the principal offenders here. I may say, I never waited in one of those long lines—my nine o'clock sprint served me well!

With so much to see, and so little time in which to do so, one became very conscious of the quality of display in the different exhibits. Some of the pavilions were laid out in such a way that you would need at least a whole day to visit them properly. Well, of course, most visitors were only there for a few days altogether, and for them, displays such as those of France and the Soviet Union were a little frustrating—like trying to browse through every department of Selfridges in half an hour! In this respect, the displays which developed along a set route had an advantage, in that one could accelerate past those sections which did not particularly interest one, and linger in others.

Italy's black, lava-like concrete catacomb was marvellous in this respect, and was also one of the few national pavilions to link its display to the overall theme of Man and his World. In a very succinct section on Birth, Education, Health, Love and Death, was included a plaster cast of one of the petrified victims of Pompeii, displayed as if at the bottom of an excavation. As a result of that strange tourist syndrome which has made a gold-mine out of almost every fountain in Europe, the anguished, grovelling figure was now half smothered in small coins. The contrast between the deluge of fire which captured him so long ago, and the rain of cold currency which now pattered down made this display particularly poignant.

The British pavilion was exceedingly popular, and was also one of the few to show a sense of humour. On entry, a moving belt carried visitors slowly through a darkened spiral tunnel, peopled with misty figures out of the dark ages, the Roman and barbarian invasions, mediaeval clangour of arms and a gradual crescendo of accelerating history which carried you up into a round chamber where portraits of great Britons past and present surround a vast turbo-reactor. From there on, the whole exhibition was a delightful concoction of gift-wrapped understatements and tongue-in-cheek fanfares.

Three days at Expo was all I had, and was too little. Yet I saw too much to set down in so small a space. The world had converged on Montreal, and it was all there—from the tiny Mayan clay figurines in Mexico's shell-like structure to the towering stable of "Man" by Calder which loomed over the Ile Ste-Hélène, from the eerie spirit-haunted atmosphere of Canada's Katimavik, to the jostling bonhomie of La Ronde. Even the restaurants offered fare which ranged from hot dogs to caviar, from arctic char to couscous and curry, from steak-and-kidney to sukiyaki. It was all there, Man and his World, material and spiritual, microscopic and universal, yin and yang, wind, sand and stars.

OBITUARY

HARRY J. RANDALL—at Sibford, 1904-10. President, S.O.S.A. 1929-30.

The sudden death of Harry Randall in May 1967 at the age of 72 will have come as a shock to many of the older members of the association.

Harry spent six years at Sibford from 1904 to 1910, a period which marked the end of the Oddie reign and saw the coming of James T. and Mabel Harrod. After leaving school he joined the staff of the City of London Electric Lighting Company and, indeed, spent practically the whole of his business life in the administrative section of the industry, becoming eventually Chairman of the London Electricity Board where he served with distinction and being rewarded with the C.B.E. for his services.

On the outbreak of the first world war he immediately joined the F.A.U. but after only a few months joined the Royal Flying Corps and served as a pilot for the remainder of the war.

He had very many outside interests, a natural ability for public speaking and was a talented photographer but his most absorbing hobby was horticulture, in which he excelled in hybridising with Iris, Daffodils and Nemerocallis, producing many new varieties. After becoming President of the British Iris Society, Harry served for many years on Royal Horticultural Society Committees and judged at their shows.

It is, however, for his untiring efforts for the S.O.S.A. that he will be best remembered by our older members especially after the first war when following nearly five years of inactivity he set about reviving interest by getting in touch with Old Scholars particularly in the London area and organising local re-unions. At the 1919 gathering he was appointed Secretary and Treasurer and held these offices for several years. He was elected President in 1929 and the re-union over which he presided the following year coincided with the retirement as Headmaster of J. T. Harrod.

In 1923 Harry married Elsie Wells, herself an Old Scholar, who survives him with their three children.

A very full life indeed and one word probably characterises every thing he did—perfectionist.

FREDERICK E. GOUDGE.

MEETING HOUSE GATES—SIBFORD GOWER

The new wrought iron gates at the Meeting House were used for the first time on the Sunday of Old Scholars, 27th August, 1967. The opportunity has been taken of widening the opening, and setting the gates back somewhat from the road. The result is that cars may now be driven in and parked behind the Meeting House, thus saving congestion in Temple Mills Road.

The gates are in memory of Arthur and Florence Wells. For many years they were closely associated with the Friends School at the Ferris, to which they were frequent visitors, and he was a member of the School Committee. Their home in Birmingham was always "open house" to Old Scholars.

They were the parents of Elsie Randall, Margery, Gordon and Bill Wells.

PRESIDENTIAL PROFILE—1967

JONAS FIELDING writes:—

I grew up in a village on the outskirts of Bradford and progressed from the local Primary School to Grange, one of the city Grammar Schools, and from there to the University of Leeds. In 1932 I was at the University of Breslau for a time and in the same year attended my first work camp with I.V.S. and made my first contact with Quakers. Other interests were most forms of games but especially athletics and cross-country running, pot-holing, camping and fell-walking. It was through a common membership of Choral and Madrigal Groups at the University that Marjorie and I met.

My first teaching post was as Sports Master, Mathematics and Music Master at Whetley Lane Secondary School. I taught German to Technical College students and English to foreigners to augment the generous salary of about £4.10.0 a week. When war broke out I was at the South East Essex Technical College and Marjorie and I were married in 1940 and had a few weeks together before the R.A.F. claimed me. In 1946 I came out but owing to housing difficulties in Essex we moved north again with our young children, Anne and Howard, to Shipley, Yorkshire, where I taught Music and English at the Grammar School founded by Sir Titus Salt. Here again, I helped with teaching English to refugees and in particular those displaced from Baltic countries by the advancing Russians. This interest led me to my first headship of a boarding school of a peculiar nature. There were, in fact, only two such schools in the country for children of displaced persons living together in hutted camps. Our caretaker was Lithuanian, our Welfare Officer a Yugoslav, and other nationalities represented were Latvian, Estonian and Ukrainian. Our only common language was German.

From there I moved to a village Headship of a Junior and Infants School where I was also Head of the Evening Institute and Conductor of the Brass Band until after some years the challenge of Colne Valley, the first purpose-built Comprehensive School of the West Riding, was too great to resist. We had, by this time, joined the Society of Friends and acquired our third child, Rosemary. Anne and Howard were both at Grammar School in Bradford so we divided the distance between Bradford and the Colne Valley and settled at Brighouse which had a small struggling Meeting. This was in 1956 and I was still using a bicycle as my daily form of transport and the whole family was still very fond of walking though Rosemary's first mountain ascent was mainly on her father's shoulders. I left Colne Valley High School for a Secondary Modern School in Cleckheaton and if anybody had told me as a boy that I should live in Brighouse, work in Cleckheaton, they would have been greeted with great merriment for Brighouse and Cleckheaton were butts for West Riding humour (places where crows were alleged to fly backwards to keep t'muck out of their eyes).

We had never heard, I think, of Sibford then, though we knew most of the Northern Friends' Schools through activities in the Holiday School movement, until eventually we felt led to it as Quakers have been drawn from the North before in its history. The important word here is the 'we' for unlike most of my other work, here was something for both Marjorie and me. We were both interviewed and duly took up residence in Holly House in April 1962.

OTHER PEOPLE'S BUSINESS . . .

by GODFREY BASELEY (Sibford 1916-19)

Editor of 'The Archers'

The grass is always greener in the next field, or so it seems to be with most animals, and so far as we human beings are concerned other peoples' jobs seem more exciting than our own.

This certainly seems to be the case when that job has anything to do with the world of entertainment. I know from personal experience that most people think I live in a world of glamorous females and magic way become an every day story on radio. Let me be quite frank. I do meet many exciting people, and occasionally glamorous females, but, the majority of my time is taken up in sheer hard work, to keep up with time schedules, dead lines and a host of minor problems similar to those of business men the world over. What results are achieved, are brought about from perspiration rather than inspiration. The title of Editor, to the uninitiated, may conjure up a picture of someone sat at a large desk in a massive and beautifully appointed office, surrounded by telephones and intercoms, with a host of people waiting to carry out every whim, and then finally to have the power to accept or reject the offerings that are served up to him. This may be alright in films, it might bear some resemblance to top executive Editors in the Press world, but certainly not in the case of the Editor of 'The Archers'. To keep a programme running five days a week, for over seventeen years, on material that has to be 'created' and then presented as though it was really happening, calls for a non-stop all out effort, both mentally and physically.

A daily radio serial uses up material at a tremendous pace, and in order to keep the machine running it is necessary to plan a long way ahead and build up a reserve of potential story material. If the programme was purely fictional this would not be too difficult, but in the case of the Archers, every item must be factually accurate, and be a true representation of life and work in a West Midland village and the surrounding rural area. It is the job of the Editor to provide the material and present it to the Writers in a form that lends itself to dramatisation. To do this I work in three stages. Five years ahead, one year ahead and a month or six weeks ahead of transmission date, which is when the scripts are actually written. In addition to this, there is the day by day watch on the programme to see what has already been recorded, does not ignore events or news that would certainly have an impact on a rural community, and always be prepared to write in a topical insert right up to five o'clock on the day of transmission. The impact of a serious outbreak of Foot and Mouth Disease is a typical example.

My five year planning is mainly concerned with research and development in farming practice. This means that I must make regular visits to research stations and experimental farms and see what the Boffins are up to try to assess what impact the results of their work could have on our village. I must keep myself acquainted through reading scientific journals, of what is happening agriculturally in other parts of the world. For instance, at the present moment I am interested in work that is going on in Australia on the dehydration of milk. In their case this will provide them with another valuable export, but I want to know if the methods that they are using could be applied to a large scale dairy unit—one thousand cows and over—in this country where the milk could be processed on the farm, thus saving heavy transport costs and road congestion that is forecast in the future. Linked with this is further exploration in to the possibilities or likelihood of British people accepting reconstituted milk in the same way that they have accepted 'Instant Coffee'. If this is so, then I must be ready to reflect this in the programme not only as a fact, but on what changes this could bring about in the lives of our characters, remembering all the time that the writers will need to see dramatic possibilities in it, particularly if it is likely to stir up any emotional problems. Rapid changes have taken place in farming techniques over the past few years which we have been able to reflect, and there will be no slowing down in the years ahead. My investigations seem to suggest that in the not too distant future, all livestock will be kept in intensive conditions, chemical cultivation will increase, there will be very much more automation applied to farming. Already there are farms in this country using computers to plan the cropping and stocking. What affect will this have on the programme? The most important that I see will be the change in the type of people that will live and work in the village. The days of Ned Larkins and Walter Gabriels are practically over, the comedy of the future will need to be more sophisticated.

At the one year planning stage it is necessary to become quite positive about what material will be used, and at this point the Writers are brought into the picture. All the possibilities are outlined and discussed, and from this list the Writers make their choice of items based mainly on how they see them in relation to dramatic possibilities. Following this meeting, I prepare a brief, setting out in detail all the information that is necessary to keep the story accurate and feasible within the framework of the programme. At times it is advisable to take them out on location to see the situations for themselves, and to meet the kind of people who are involved in the situation. Such trips are invaluable to give the programme a real sense of authenticity. There is an added value to this meeting. It means that the ground can be well prepared for a major story line that will emerge at a future date. Although we have two writers, they work as individuals when they are actually producing the script. Roughly a month at a time. Before they start on their stint I have another meeting with the writer concerned to deal with the format of the individual scenes. A summary of these discussions is produced and a copy sent to the writer who is resting in order that he shall be fully in the picture, and be able to see at what point he will be picking up the story again and what kind of continuity he will need to maintain. Once the writer actually sits down to the typewriter he must be free to write as he pleases, so long as the hard core of the plan is maintained. This is when their own expertise is brought into play, or when the 'characters' living in their minds take over and dictate the words and phrases in any particular situation. Finally the scripts come back to me for a final check for accuracy before being handed on to the producer to be rehearsed and recorded.

With a programme of this nature, carrying information as well as being a medium for entertainment. Correspondence is fairly heavy both in and out of the office. We have farmers write to us to ask about the source of our information; we are a sitting target for all the 'antis' and if we tend to get a bit ahead with our farming techniques we get a lot of critical comment from some of our listeners. Every letter is answered. Being Editor of the Archers is a non-stop job. It is with you eating and sleeping.

There are compensations of course. You get a great deal of satisfaction from knowing that you are helping millions of people to get to know about the countryside a lot better. You meet a lot of very interesting people, and on occasions you can make personal contact with 'glamour' in the form of an actress auditioning for a part.

A CATERER'S VIEW OF SIBFORD

The spirits of Oliver Twist and Mr. Bumble were around at Sibford during the Summer Term. The School gave us a wonderful musical production of Dickens famous novel but we were pleased that the ghosts did not materialise in the Kitchens. Nevertheless one cannot help but be impressed at the ease and economy of an endless diet of gruel and the downward trend of food costs would gladden the heart of any bursar. But parents, headmasters and other educationists would be appalled at such a prospect and the modern Sibford is a long way removed from the standards of education and board portrayed in "Oliver Twist."

I was appointed Catering Manager at Sibford in May, 1964, and took over from Richard Lee at the opening of the Summer Term of that year. It was a heavy term and, before I had settled in, the Whitsuntide Reunion of Old Scholars was held. From the first day I saw Sibford I was impressed and felt that it was a School in which I would be proud and happy to serve. My views have not changed but like all jobs, life has its ups and its downs. One feels exhausted and thankful when the end of term arrives but, curiously enough, the opening of term brings great joy, happiness and relief after the inactivity of the holiday period.

Looking back over my records, we had a total School of 266 and 20 staff in my first year; those numbers have grown to 300 children and 26 staff at the present time. The increase is significant when considered as a rise of 14%. The rise was so great that, for a time, lunch was held in two sittings. This proved so inconvenient to all concerned that a cafeteria system was introduced about twelve months ago and this method of feeding the children at lunch time has worked remarkably well.

We favour home cooking at Sibford and we prepare as many made dishes as we possibly can. Obviously there are some things for which we have no facilities and, for example, we have to buy in factory made bread, rolls and most of our cakes. Wherever possible, however, we like to prepare our own dishes and, thanks to the recent improvements and additions in the Kitchens, this is possible on a larger scale than ever before. We are fortunate in having the School gardens to supply us with a large proportion of our green vegetables which is an economy as well as a blessing that much of our green-stuff is home produced.

Perhaps one of the biggest problems facing a Caterer in an institution such as a boarding school is the problem of menu selection. For reasons of economy we have to work on a single menu and only occasionally can we offer a choice. The problem is the selection of a diet acceptable for everyone for twenty-one varying meals in every week. It is inevitable that there are likes and dislikes, grumbles and groans and the satisfied and the dissatisfied. Who said have fish on a Friday?—why not a Saturday?—why fish anyway?

One of the most significant changes during my career at Sibford has been the change and extension to catering on the social side of the School. During this time house parties, socials and dances seem to have changed their character and the style of catering has changed with it. We now try to help the children to stage a proper buffet meal as opposed to what might have been a very ordinary attempt at providing "eats" before. This is another side of Sibford catering and includes Committee dinners, conference catering, the Christmas Tree, General Meeting and other special catering events. In all these things we try to provide varied and interesting menus and, at the same time, to keep strictly within the financial limits of the budget. All these activities place an additional burden on the catering staff but we are delighted if the event is successful and our reward is the compliment of a satisfactory meal.

The catering industry is large but lacks recruits of the right calibre for the future. The Government hopes to meet this deficiency by the proper training and recruitment of apprentices and, to this end, has set up the Catering Training Board. All large establishments are registered and called upon to pay a levy towards the activities of the Board and, where up to certain standards, to take an apprentice and to see that he is properly trained. Sibford Catering Department has been approved as of the right standard and it is possible that an apprentice will be allocated to it for training.

The trend in Catering Establishments, coping for large numbers, is in the direction of micro wave cooking. But the initial cost of this equipment, such as deep freeze banks, micro wave equipment, and storage, would run into many thousands of pounds, so for the next few years at least, we will not be turning from the conventional way of cooking.

To finish on a more topical line, I must say that I have had the utmost co-operation from all members of the Staff, and pupils which to anyone does make one's job much easier and I hope to continue the "Feeding" of Sibford for some time to come.

UNDER THE TWO ELMS

BIRMINGHAM BRANCH

Our first gathering was here at Park Farm, where we celebrated Bonfire Night in the traditional style and let off not only Wilders Rockets but some magnificent Sibford ones as well. Our kitchen was filled to capacity as Old Scholars and well wishers queued up for a feast of "Beans and Bangers" followed by Brandy Snaps, Bakewell Tarts and Coffee.

In January we again paid a visit to the Redditch home of Mike and Kathy Gibbins for a New Year Party. Once again Stan Ewan made a fine M.C. and we all enjoyed a happy and amusing evening.

At the end of March we 'warmed' the new Edgbaston home of David and Ruth Smallbone. We all contributed to the supper table which looked like a page out of 'Mrs. Beeton.' Stan and Mabel Ewan entertained us with a delightful colour slide show of Greece.

A glorious Sunday afternoon in July saw a fine gathering in the Orchard at the Binton home of Warwick and Sheila Williams. After a picnic tea and a walk to the lovely old parish church to see the Scott memorial window a number of O.S. went boating on the nearby river Avon. Later in the evening we refreshed ourselves at the "Blue Boar" and enjoyed chicken in a Basket and Ploughmans Lunch. It was a great pleasure to have Phyllis and Gordon Wells with us on this occasion. A small produce stall raised the fine sum of £25.6. towards our local branch funds.

We are delighted to have Hugh and Daphne Maw as members of our local branch, also Pam (née Sutherland) and Alan Huble, Carol and Lorna. A little more support from the more recent leavers would be appreciated.

This has been a most successful year in every way and I do wish to thank you all for your kind help and loyal support on all these occasions.

BARBARA ABERCROMBIE.

LONDON BRANCH

As forecast in the last Report, London Branch met in November 1966 at the home of John and Monica Taylor at Brookmans Park. Twenty-eight signed the "register," and we enjoyed seeing transparencies of home and overseas, chatting, and consuming loads of good food.

Our Christmas party at Westminster Meeting House was well attended, with games and pastimes organised by Brian and Ian Wright, and catering in the hands of Myfanwy Kidney.

Our first reunion in 1967 in March was an "at home" with Janet Eavis, when at least twenty-three of us accepted her hospitality. Films and transparencies were much enjoyed, with comments and backchat among the audience adding to that enjoyment. A novel feature on this occasion was the fireman's chain by which refreshments were quickly transferred from kitchen to consumer.

In May thirty-one of us, including children and other friends, met at Greenwich, most of us having travelled there by river. After a picnic lunch, George Edwards guided us round the Observatory, the Naval Museum, and the Painted Hall. With his store of knowledge and anecdotes of Greenwich's history, he made us feel that our few hours there (dictated by the time of our returning boat) were all too short. We were fortunate in the weather, which remained dry—and even sunny—until we disembarked at Westminster Pier.

That is the report of our activities to the end of September. In October we hope a number of us will meet for a visit to Guildford followed by a meal in a restaurant at Woking, and in November the Branch Secretaries are inviting members to their home in North London. More of these plans next time.

THE SCHOOL—HEADMASTER'S REPORT

I want to begin by looking at the School in its general life. At the opening of the School year 1966/7 Gillett House was not yet completed and into those two old cottages across the road from the Manor House were crowded the whole of the new intake of girls who would eventually be Penn House members and move into Gillett. Never in the History of the School has the name 'Ark' been so apt for those premises. We have struggled manfully to find some way of fulfilling the promise of making and producing three Girls' Houses out of the Manor after the horrid realisation that there would be no money available for the third House. Gillett was opened in January of this year and the courtyard (which was the old playground) was nearly ready for the Old Scholars' Reunion. We are grateful to Old Scholars and ex-Presidents for their gift of seats, one in memory of Arnold Kaye. Since August that part of the Manor that houses Lister Girls has been re-adapted and we are very pleased with the result.

We have made changes in our life after consulting together and those changes which have been made we have found advantageous. Thanks to the extended dining room it has been possible at lunch time to have a cafeteria system of service so that all of us may come into lunch between 12.45 p.m. and 1.15 p.m. without any fear of being rushed or missing our rations. Those with ampler appetites, if they have the stamina to stay there until 1.20 p.m. can sometimes get extra helpings. This has enabled the lunch hour to become a genuine sixty minute break for many people so that all kinds of little meetings, which previously were very rushed, can now be held without undue haste.

The co-operation between ourselves and other schools in the area which I reported last year and which has come to be known by the not very interesting title of N.O.E. (North Oxfordshire Experiment), has continued. A History Conference was held at the girls' Independent School, Tudor Hall. Because of differences in term dates and transport problems the administrative problems have been great. Nevertheless, at a Plenary Session of Staff and Tutors it was agreed that the experiment had been well worthwhile and we were encouraged to go on for a further year.

This has been a year with more Staff changes than is usual at Sibford. When Martin Dodsworth, first Housemaster to leave from our original team, left in January to go to Leicester, we were pleased to welcome back to the fold a previous member of Staff, Lindsay Martin. In the French Department we shall miss Margaret Le Mare and wish her well in her retirement. Lydie Jomini is to be married, Robin Milne is going abroad under the V.S.O. Scheme and Wendy Stone is to be Housemother of fifteen children in one of the County's Residential Schools. We welcomed Deborah Sach as an additional English teacher at the beginning of last year but since she is to be married we had regretfully to say goodbye to her. Julie Thomas joined us to add colour and strength to both our Music and English Departments. Our Sister in the Sanatorium left to be married at Easter and Arthur Harrison, has been transferred to another branch, as it were, of the same firm in that he is now working at Leighton Park. We are happy that Pam Lucas is still with us though she has given up teaching and been replaced by Pat Drummond. Phyllis Minshaw (Domestic Science and Nansen House), Tony Rye and Gilbert Todd (Modern Languages), are the other newcomers.

If I mention the sort of Courses members of Staff have attended this year, it will give some idea of both their breadth of interests and of their stamina in tearing themselves away from a seven day a week establishment to go on this kind of busman's holiday. There have been at least two English Courses attended, one of which was specially biased towards Remedial English, Programmed Learning, a Careers Convention, a Course based upon the Newsome Report 'Half our Pupils,' an Introduction to Computers, Pastoral Care in Schools, Music, School Organisation and Adolescent Needs and Team Teaching, and Nuffield Science Courses.

The School's Productions have again been extremely lively and have fired enthusiasm from a very large number of both Staff and pupils. The Dramatic Society with their performance of 'Dandy Dick' in the Autumn, the Carol Service with its excerpts from the Messiah, the children's colourful costumes and sketches at Hallowe'en and lastly the performance of an adaptation of 'Oliver Twist,' have all been examples of very excellent team-work.

In Sport, Rugby has established itself now with three boys representing the County, and two girls representing the County in Netball. At the North Oxfordshire Sports although we did not this year come out overall winners (this is too much to hope) we were a close second to Banbury and it is clear that there are only three schools in the hunt, Banbury, Chipping Norton and Sibford.

The Paris visit was again successful and this time the whole of the Second Year participated. The Sailing Club flourishes as part of the Banbury Schools' Sailing Association with a member of our Staff as Treasurer. Our Head Boy, Michael Thake, went for a cruise on the well known vessel Sir Winston Churchill which, I understand, has now tried a female crew but this has, I believe, no connection. The School Charities Committee has been sharply challenged on several occasions during the year and has staunchly maintained its part in supporting our African friend, Stephen Chirindo, and they are hoping to enlarge their giving to include other charities.

This year, due directly or indirectly to the influence of the Government Commission on Independent Schools, we have become very questionnaire conscious. We discovered by the criteria of one questionnaire that although the bulk of our parents belong to the managerial or professional classes, all types are represented. 10% of parents were educated at Friends' School, 42% of our pupils came from maintained schools, and of our leavers, 60% go on to some form of further education. This year we have had four 'A' Level candidates, one of whom is going to continue her education in France and the other three have been accepted at Teacher Training Colleges of Further Education.

Since 1950 there have been impressive efforts to improve the amenities of Sibford and there can be no further progress until the completion of the Manor modification for which we have had to borrow heavily.

The Old Scholars' Re-Union in August was a most enjoyable occasion made even more pleasant by the sunshine which graced the Weekend. That they go so smoothly is a tribute to the hard-working committee and the School is grateful not only for the gift of the seats but for the work of those who laboured on the Pavilion. We look forward to many more of these Gatherings.

SIBFORD SCHOOL

BUILDING PROGRESS REPORT

Again your Editor has asked me to provide a few notes on the above topic, this time he poses two questions asked often at your Reunion in August:

1. "What has happened to the old boys' playground."
2. "Are we being rather soft towards present day scholars."

The short answer to both questions is "Progress," though the first question might have an historical answer, as I assume the playground dates back to the days when the whole school was housed in the Manor, when the Hill was built the playground was retained as a space to keep boys occupied while waiting for meals, now they have cafeteria meals and there is no need to wait.

When planning the Girls' Houses the Architects suggested the Houses be grouped around this playground thus forming a court with many windows looking onto it. To encourage ball games in this court meant window guards and a prison like effect, whereas we envisaged the court as a sheltered sunny area where scholars could stand and talk, sit and read, a pleasant space to look out onto and to pass through. This suggestion met with staff and committee approval.

At Sibford there is a shortage of hard surfaced play areas. We have a scheme, inspired by the Head Master, for a school social centre, based on a group of rooms (say three) classroom size, usable for teaching but sited around and opening by folding doors onto a foyer with a small kitchen, so that the whole can be used in the evening for social purposes. In this scheme we hope to provide a paved play area enclosed on three sides by the buildings, with no windows facing onto it! A space where boys can knock about without hindrance.

Perhaps Old Scholars who regret the passing of the old boys' playground would like to contribute towards the £15,000 required to erect this centre. We might then call it a playground for Old Boys.

The second question about being soft to present day scholars is the normal reaction to progress, some people consider fitted carpets in bedrooms, refrigerators, central heating, washing machines, a high standard of illumination etc., as soft and most reluctantly accept these conditions but would not willingly go without them again.

Present day scholars live in homes more comfortable than scholars of 50 years ago, if they are to be happy and relaxed they must have improved conditions at school, also, most parents look for a higher standard of scholastic achievement in exams today and more quiet comfortable space is required for study as well as for discussion and leisure pursuits. If scholars have less menial tasks at School, in exchange the school teaches them how to use the time saved.

As an Architect I believe that well designed surroundings have a beneficial effect on people in contact with them and are an essential part of children's education, especially in a boarding school where these new houses take the place of their homes for two thirds of the year.

Cost wise the buildings are not luxurious and other school authorities find it hard to obtain the effect for the same money.
